

Talk announcement

Felix Dreßler
(NuMa)

Tuesday, June 2, 2026
13:45, S2 416-1

Eddy Current Losses in Electromagnetic Machines

Electromagnetic devices such as transformers and inductive heating systems are widely used in industrial and household applications. Their performance is affected by eddy currents, which cause unwanted losses and heating in transformer housings, while being intentionally utilized for heat generation in inductive heating. Accurate simulation of these effects is therefore essential. We simulate eddy-current losses and compare different loss-calculation approaches.